The University of Lincoln: A Research-Engaged and Collaborative Community

Dr Karin Crawford and John-Paul Dickie
Overview

Reflecting on the journey of change that Lincoln has taken to develop a culture of partnership with students across the institution.
In the beginning

• Student as Producer developed and initially led by Professor Mike Neary, building on his work at the University of Warwick;

• It connects the relationship between research and teaching;

• An institution-wide long-term change strategy
Supporting people

Student Engagement Champions
  • From six enthusiasts to a network of 49

Developed Personal Tutoring
  • New to this academic year
  • Currently being rolled out
A collaborative community

- Beyond
- University
- Discipline
- Curriculum
Opportunities for students to engage

• Staff and Student Insight Scheme
• Student Recruiters
• Student Reviewers
• Student Advisory Groups
• Students Consulting on Teaching
• Peer Assisted Study Sessions (PASS)
• Student Teaching Panels
• Student Digital Leads
• Joint Review of Practice
Students’ Union

• Own journey of change

• Relationship to Partnership

• Based on shared values and a common goal
Case study: Assessment and Feedback

• Survey within the School of Life Sciences

• Led by School Representative

• Impact starting to be seen across the school

• New approaches, criteria and methods
Case Study: Library Advisory Group

• Introduced by Student Engagement Champion Faye Cleminson

• Developed from needing more than a focus group.

• Now, a group of students and staff actively improving the library experience

• Find out more: edeu.lincoln.ac.uk/sharing
Where now? What next?

- Partnership by default
- Moving forward as partners
- Shared challenges and opportunities
Questions?

Dr Karin Crawford
kcrawford@lincoln.ac.uk
@karinscrawford

John-Paul Dickie
jdickie@lincoln.ac.uk
@johnpauldickie

EDEU
EDEU@lincoln.ac.uk
@LincolnEDEU